Factsheet

July 2026

Fund Objective

The primary objective of the Taquanta Enhanced Cash Fund is to achieve consistent returns in excess of a generic money market fund with an emphasis on capital preservation and low performance volatility.

Investment Strategy

Employs a conservative approach to enhance yields through extracting the liquidity risk premium primarily in longer-dated bank paper with a maximum maturity up to 7 years. Our fundamental credit review process is robust, combining qualitative and quantitative analysis, overlaid with institutional memory to question convention, operating within a strong risk and compliance framework. The fund is primarily invested in bank issued instruments that can be liquidated easily.

Factsheet

July 2026

Fund Outlook

Our cash and income funds remain well positioned for the current monetary cycle. With policymakers likely to remain cautious and data-dependent, our preference for high-quality floating-rate instruments continues to provide attractive carry while limiting credit and duration risk. These instruments will continue to reset their coupons in line with prevailing short-term rates, supporting income generation even as the market reassesses the likelihood of further tightening. This positioning should continue to benefit income investors, who are earning returns comfortably above 1..

Market Commentary

Geopolitical developments remained a key driver of market sentiment in July. Renewed tensions in the Middle East continued to pose upside risks to oil and fertiliser prices, although signs of progress in negotiations between the United States and Iran helped ease pressure on global energy markets late in the month. Expectations of improved shipping conditions through key trade routes, including the Strait of Hormuz, also contributed to lower oil prices.

Locally, the South African Reserve Bank's July MPC decision to leave the repo rate unchanged at 7.00% was consistent with our expectations, even though it appeared to catch much of the market by surprise. The split vote, with four members favouring a hold and two preferring a 25 basis-point hike, reflected the difficult balance facing the Committee: inflation remains above the preferred 3% target, while growth risks have become more pronounced amid weak domestic demand.

South Africa's inflation backdrop became more challenging in the previous month, with June headline CPI rising to 5.0% year-on-year, from 4.5% in May, marking the highest reading in two years. The increase was driven primarily by transport costs, rather than broad-based demand pressure. Annual transport inflation accelerated to 12.7%, while fuel prices rose 34.3% over the year, reflecting steep increases in diesel and petrol prices. By contrast, food inflation continued to ease, with food and non-alcoholic beverages slowing to 1.6% year-on-year, providing some relief to consumers.

On the other hand, Absa's seasonally adjusted Purchasing Managers' Index declined to 46.8 points in July, from 47.3 in June, marking a second consecutive month of contraction and the weakest reading in seven months. The decline reflected subdued export demand and increased caution among manufacturers in response to rising input costs. Against a backdrop of labour-market strain and fragile domestic activity, raising the policy rate in this environment could have placed further pressure on household consumption, investment spending and business confidence, increasing the risk of an even weaker economic growth outcome.

Financial markets initially reacted negatively to the decision. With many investors having anticipated a rate increase following the stronger-than-expected inflation print, the decision to hold prompted a reassessment of interest rate expectations. The rand weakened briefly to around R16.98 per US dollar, its weakest level in several months, as markets recalibrated South Africa's expected interest rate differential relative to developed markets, particularly the United States. It later recovered toward levels more consistent with fair value.

Globally, the backdrop also supports a measured policy stance. In the United States, inflation showed signs of moderation, with annual CPI declining to 3.5% in June, from 4.2% in May, while core inflation eased to 2.6%. The monthly CPI decline was driven largely by lower energy prices, following reduced geopolitical tensions and a pullback in oil prices. Similarly, US growth softened in the second quarter, with real GDP expanding at an annualised 1.5%, down from 2.1% in the first quarter, reinforcing the need for caution by global central banks.
